Describe the present and original (if known) physical appearance

The exterior form of the Galloway-Williams House consists of a hip-roofed block with chamfered bays projecting from the main mass and fronted with gables displaying fine jig-sawn verge boards. Exterior walls are covered with novelty siding; gables are filled with alternate rows of staggered butt shingles and vertical reeded board. Two gables have circular punch work gable vents. The porches are supported by turned columns and have an abundance of Eastlake-inspired spindles at the eave line and turned balusters at the hand rail. The entry doors on the east and south sides are especially notable, showing Queen Anne detailing in an aedicula motif surrounding the door glass, with a horizontal raised panel having similar detailing located below it. Windows have louvered shutters except in rooms added at rear.

The house has been enlarged several times by additions to the rear, as is shown in the enclosed sketches based on Sanborn Insurance maps. These additions are generally compatible. Only one set of aluminum casement sash is objectionable.

Significant interior features are the Eastlake-inspired spindle work and Colonial Revival motifs of the framed opening with paneled wainscot level dividers located in the central hall (and shown in photograph number 4 of 4). Also notable are the fine Colonial Revival fireplace surrounds, mantles, and over-mantles, paneled doors, door and window casings, and base molding.

A turn-of-the-century iron fence still remains at the southeast corner of the site as does an iron hitching post.

The Galloway-Williams House is currently undergoing a rehabilitation.

Statement of Significance (in one paragraph)

The Galloway-Williams House is one of Jackson's finest examples of a Queen Anne Style cottage with Eastlake-inspired ornament. Both its external and internal integrity are almost completely intact. It is one of only a very few such structures remaining in an area of Jackson which was once dominated by similar late-ninteenth-century residences. Its site is an especially important one, directly across Fortification Street from the fastidiously restored, Gothic Revival Manship House, one of Jackson's most notable historic structures.

The Queen Anne Style was popular during the last two decades of the nineteenth century. Salient features are irregular massing, steep roofs, and a wide variety of highly textured materials. The Eastlake mode was a Queen Anne variation which arrived from England and was characterized by the spindle-work and other wood details popularized by Charles Eastlake in his furniture designs. The Galloway-Williams house exhibits form and detail which place it in the mainstream of both of these developments.

The Galloway-Williams House was built as the home of Annie Jane Jones Manship and her husband, Albert Galloway. They were the parents of Effie Lee Galloway, who later became Mrs. Frank Scott. The Galloways, the Scotts, and members of their families have been notable in the building and development of Jackson (Jackson Landmarks, compiled by the Junior League of Mississippi [Jackson, Mississippi], 80).
