DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Greystone Hotel is an imposing two-story three-by-three-bay Colonial Revival-style structure facing east overlooking Greenwood Cemetery. The building is clapboarded, hip roofed, and distinguished by its two-tiered gallery supported on monumental fluted Ionic columns with Scamozzi capitals. A two-tiered rear gallery has been enclosed. Projecting from the south elevation is a two-story polygonal bay which terminates in a pedimented gable. An off-center entrance incorporates side lights and transom, which contain diamond-shaped panes. The diamond motif is also present in the upper sash of the first-floor windows which flank the entrance, and in the small window on the north elevation which contains colored glass and lights the stairwell. A door centrally placed on the second floor of the front elevation opens onto a cantilevered balustraded balcony.

The interior is largely intact and contains three rooms grouped around the hall on the first floor and four rooms on the second floor. In addition to the Colonial Revival-style staircase with squared newel posts, the mantelpieces are notable original features. Those on the first floor contain curved posts and mirrored overmantels. Mantels on the second floor are simpler, with squared posts and no overmantel.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Important to the study of black history in Jackson, the present Greystone Hotel is probably the only Colonial Revival-style building constructed by George Thomas, a self-taught black contractor well known for his Bungalow-style residences in the community. The size of the two-story building and its formalism set it apart from its neighbors, small vernacular cottages or dwellings designed in the Bungalow style.

Constructed in 1912 as a residence for Alex Williams, a black grocer who owned property which ran 400 feet west (along present Lamar Lane) and whose store was located immediately north of the present structure, the dwelling apparently fulfilled a life-long dream. George Thomas, contractor for the project, aged 96, still lives in the neighborhood, one block north on Cohea Street. The Ionic columns are said to have been built to Alex William's specifications, and the interior planned with Thomas's assistance by members of the Williams family. Apparently Williams did not live to enjoy his new residence for long, since only his wife is listed at the address in the 1916 Jackson city directory. By 1922 the directory listed Harry and Betty Marino. Harry Marino, a cotton sampler with the W.J. Davis Company, and Betty Marino, a teacher at Smith Robertson School, lived at the address until 1945, when they purchased the next house north. The building was first listed as a hotel in 1950. Also at that time the street name was changed from Grayson to Lamar (perhaps the name Greystone is a corruption of Grayson), and shotgun cottages were constructed on the rear lot, forming Lamar Lane.
