Describe the present and original (if known) physical appearance

The Wright House is a one-and-a-half story, frame, Queen Anne residence with multi-hipped roof and wide, overhanging eaves with modillion brackets. A two-story polygonal bay projects from the facade, which was originally fronted by a one-story full-width porch that wrapped in front of the bay. Only the southern portion of the original porch remains and it was extended southerly in the 1920's to form a porte cochere. The porch and porte-cochere extension are now supported by turned Ionic columns arranged in a pair and in triple units at the corners of the porte-cochere. The northern portion of the facade is fronted by a hipped-roof, one-room addition. The original windows of the house are filled with one-over-one, double-hung sash, and the window openings dating to the 1920's additions and remodeling are filled with patterned casement sash, some with patterned transoms. The entrance doorway is transomed and filled with a single-leaf glazed door dating to the 1920's.

Specific dates Ca. 1900

Builder/Architect unknown

Statement of Significance (in one paragraph)

The Wright House was constructed ca. 1900 as the residence of C. E. Wright, an important figure in the early twentieth-century development of Greenwood as the primary cotton market for the Delta region during Mississippi's second great-cotton kingdom era. Wright is recorded as having been instrumental in digging the first artesian well in 1895 and in the establishment of the city water works in 1897. Wright also founded the local Coca-Cola Bottling Company. The house is today owned by descendants of C. E. Wright and is a locally significant example of Queen Anne architecture with later renovations and additions dating to the 1920's. Although the downtown area of Greenwood was once filled with houses of similar quality, most of the houses in the area immediately surrounding the downtown retail area have been demolished and replaced with new intrusive construction. Houses like the Wright House have become more important in recent years, because so few of them remain to testify to the appearance of downtown Greenwood during the boom period when the city became the important cotton marketing center of the Mississippi Delta region.
