Describe the present and original (if known) physical appearance

Situated on the west side of Cherry Street in Vicksburg, the Old Feld House is a one-story brick structure covered with scored stucco. Projecting wings of the facade and rear form courtyards in an H-shaped plan. On the facade, each wing has a piazza with Palladian openings. The three-bay, central block is composed of an arched doorway flanked by arched windows. The arched fenestration is framed by an Ionic screen with coupled columns flanking the entrance to support a well-proportioned entablature and balustrade. The entablature is carried around the wings in the form of a wide bracketed cornice. On the wings the Palladian openings of the piazzas have molded trim and a keystone. There is an elaborate terrace of varying levels in the courtyard and a castiron fence and gate on the front elevation.

Statement of Significance (in one paragraph)

The Old Feld House is one of the most architecturally significant residences of early twentieth century Mississippi. It is a significant example of Neo-Classical Revival style, with a rarely-seen degree of finish. In Mississippi the Neo-Classical Revival style was most often expressed in domestic architecture in terms of a lingering Colonial Revival taste. The Old Feld House is a unique rejection of the lingering Colonial Revival style. By its use of Palladian arches, piazzas, wide bracketed eaves and a prominent blue-tile roof, a Mediterranean connotation is successfully evoked.

The Old Feld House was constructed ca. 1913 by Hannah B. Fishell, widow of Alfred Fishell, a Vicksburg businessman. In 1929 the house was sold by Hannah Fishell to Maurice and Juliet Feld, owners of a local furniture store. The Felds and their descendants retained the property until 1974. Since 1974 the house has passed through three subsequent owners, being bought in 1976 by the present owners, Robert S. and Jean W. Parker.
